REMARKABLE RALLY

Of Republicans of Triadolphia District Saturday Night.

SPEECH BY CAPTAIN B. B. DOVENER.

Who is Escorted to Elm Grove by the Dovener Club of this City—Speeches Delivered by Others—Hundreds of Workmen Listen to the Addresses—Great Enthusiasm—Men Who Voted for the Change in 1892 Now Anxious to Vote for Another Change.

One of the most remarkable political gatherings, in some respects, ever held in the county was the Republican mass meeting at Elm Grove Saturday night, which was addressed by Captain B. B. Dovener and others. It was remarkable, first, because of the great crowd of earnest and enthusiastic workmen who gathered for such a purpose so long in advance of the opening of the campaign. It was such an assemblage as is only seen, usually, in the very heat of the campaign, when party feeling is excited to the highest pitch. Secondly, it was remarkable for the large number of Democratic workmen who participated and who publicly announced their renunciation of their allegiance to the Democracy. It seemed like a spontaneous uprising of the people of that mining region to protest against the ruinous policy of the Democratic party. The meeting, or rather the rally, was held at Sycamore grove, back of the village, and was participated in by fully 700 voters, nearly 300 of whom were Wheeling workmen, composing the Dovener Republican Club, who went out on a special train at 7:20.

The club, headed by the Bogg's Run band, marched up from the South Side to the Wheeling & Elm Grove station, where they took the train for Elm Grove. Arriving there they were met by a delegation of Republicans and paraded to Sycamore grove. The striking miners were holding a picnic there and all festivities were suspended for two hours while the large dancing pavilion was given up for the meeting.

T. J. Hugos was made chairman of the meeting. In his opening remarks he declared that while the rally was held under the auspices of those who preferred Captain Dovener for Congress, the friends of all other candidates were cordially welcomed, and no discrimination would be made against them in selecting speakers. It was a Republican meeting—a meeting of men who intended to vote for the redemption of the county and of the First congressional district regardless of who the candidate was.

He introduced Bently Jones, a representative workman, as the first speaker. Mr. Jones spoke eloquently for ten minutes and was enthusiastically applauded. He brought down the house by defining that peculiar product of Democratic times—a hobo, as a workman who voted in 1892 for a change and who is now tramping to Washington to say that he is sorry the change has come. He urged the great crowd of wage workers present, many of whom are unemployed, to vote this fall for the party under whose administration they had had employment at living wages. Every reference to the McKinley bill, McKinley himself and to Captain Dovener was loudly cheered.

D. W. Martin, another wage-worker, made a rattling ten minutes speech in the same vein and was applauded throughout. Then J. H. Burt spoke briefly, dwelling upon the remarkable demonstration before him—the unusual sight of a great and spontaneous Republican rally so long preceding a nominating convention. It was significant that the workmen of this community are more in earnest than they have ever been before and intend to take a hand in politics. They were there for business and not for fun.

Sam O. Boyce was next introduced. He spoke for ten minutes dwelling upon the disastrous effects of the election of the Democratic party to power and created amusement by his sarcastic allusions to that picturesque statesman, Mr. Pendleton, who is misrepresenting the people of this district in Congress.

After music by the band Captain Dovener, the speaker of the evening, was introduced and received an ovation. The captain spoke for a half hour. He was in good form and made one of the best speeches of his life, holding the big crowd's attention to the end. He was frequently interrupted by applause and cheers. He spoke directly upon the condition of the country at the present time, and of the disasters that have befallen the wage-workers. Only once did he refer to his own candidacy, and that was to say that his supporters were Republicans, and if it pleased the convention to nominate another every one of them would be found working loyally for his election. The great crisis through which the country is passing and the necessity for the return to power of the party that carried it safely through that other great crisis was of greater moment to them than the question of personal preference in the matter of choosing a candidate. "We are now confronted with a condition of unrest which is visible over the entire country. Hard times knock at the cabin door and the wolf is nestling there. Two years ago you were persuaded that the Democratic principles were the best. Now we are experiencing the result. The people were in 'cahoots' with the Democrats. Now the former have the 'cahoots' and the Democrats have the offices. The Republican party stands for protection. Did it not it would not have my support."

Prominent in the audience were a number of Democrats, some of whom came forward and said they would cast their first Republican vote. They were tired and disgusted with the party of false promises and principles. There were thirty ex-Democrats in the Dovener club and all marched in the procession.

It's a Trick

Of some dealers to sell some well known article at a price way below reason to get people into their stores and then "take" it out of them in big profits. And so selling our well known tailor made clothes at a trifling margin above cost may look like "Bait." But is it "Bait" when the fish can jump back into water again if he likes it better? Is it "Bait" when you may bring back what you don't like to-day, to-morrow, any day?
